AMWARE SERVES AS A GLOBAL LINK

Atlanta, GA– January 2006:

Imported furniture from Southeast Asia arrived at Amware's Atlanta, Georgia facility this week. This shipment represents the first of several ocean containers scheduled for delivery at Amware's Atlanta and Jacksonville, Florida distribution facilities.

In this distribution model, Amware will serve as a landing point for imported products slated for US distribution. We will maintain our customers' inventories until such time that the products are sold into the market place. By utilizing Amware, our customer has been afforded purchasing power amongst their suppliers and realized incremental savings by moving larger quantities of goods across their supply chain.

Rob Doyle, Vice President of Amware Logistics, added the following: “This particular new client venture elaborates our ability to perform key supply chain functions on short notice and provide excellent services.”
