FROM FAR EAST TO SOUTHEAST

Atlanta, GA – August 2004: Around mid-August, an international fulfillment company with a new distribution channel within the Southeastern United States approached Amware Logistics for fulfillment and distribution management.

Established in 1990, this full-service organization specializes in the fulfillment of food products from beef, pork, poultry, and related items such as animal feed, leather dog bones, and leashes. In addition to consumables, many related goods within their network are imports from the Far East; it is for these products that Amware Logistics services were requested. Amware's expertise in the Southeast vastly exceeded their current infrastructure abilities.

Currently, some 24,000 cases of hard goods are being amassed in Amware's Atlanta facility and staged for deployment into the Dollar General Store's vast Southeastern network or retail locations. With several product types being sourced, Amware is currently negotiating contracts to manage further logistics services for this same client.

From dog bones to beanbags, Amware has the resources to bridge this new customers supply chain effectively and efficiently. Today we welcome our newest client to our Atlanta, Georgia distribution center as we continue to service the Southeastern United States to the very best of our ability.
